An Employee Who "Made Good"

Twenty-seven years ago, F. W. Woolworth and Company needed a bookkeeper. Knowing the calibre of readers of the New York Tribune, they consulted its classified columns to fill their need. At that time Hubert T. Parson needed a job. He also had a high opinion of Tribune readers. Believing that somewhere among them was the employer he wanted, he inserted the following advertisement:

"ENERGETIC YOUNG MAN WANTS SITUATION AS BOOKKEEPER; CAN DO GENERAL CLERICAL WORK; WILLING TO START AT $12 A WEEK."

Today this "energetic young man" is president of F. W. Woolworth and Company. He has "made good," so have F. W. Woolworth and Company. They both believed in Tribune Classified Adver-

Mr. Employer, you read and enjoy The Tribune. Worth-while employees recognize this fact. That's why it probably would pay you to consult Tribune's "Situation Wanted" ads in filling that position. If you fail to find what you want, phone Beekman 3000, Classified Department, and let us insert a "Help Wanted" advertisement for you. Your bill will be sent later.

Miss Louise Hubbard, a young woman house who possesses taste and a voice which, though small in volume, is pure in quality, gave a song recital yesterday afternoon at Acolian Hall. In the opening group, and especially in Scarlatti's "Violetta" and in Haydn's "She Never Told Her Love," she showed that she had been well trained and possessed who possesses taste and a voice which. Told Her Love," she showed that she had been well trained and possessed taste. In short, she did what her limited powers permitted her to do with effectiveness. She was sympathetically greeted by an audience of moderate size. Among those engaged for the Ed, Wynn carnival, first edition, which will have its initial presentation at the Apollo Theater, Atlantic City, Friday November 21, are Lillian Fitzgerald, comedienne; Mile. Gambarelli, premiere danseuse; Edna Whistler, prima donna; Frank Ridge, operatic tenor; Regal and Moore, acrobatic comedians the Four Meyakos, Japanese musicians and dancers: Miller's Melody Boys and J. Harry Jenkins, eccentric comedian.

In the evening Mayo Wadler gave a violin recital at Carnegie Hall. The program was denominated "modern," and on it were a sonata by Nicolaiew and compositions by Carl Bush, Cecil Burleigh, Albert Stoessel, Kryjonowsky and others. Mr. Wadler was well accompanied by Walter Golde. The statement of these facts is perhaps of more interest than an enumeration of the reasons as to why Mr. Wadler's bid for public approval seemed premature. He showed no reasons why he should appear in the present state of his artistic powers, and a number of reasons why he shouldn't.

Triumph for Margaret Laurence and Wallace Eddington in "Wedding Bells"

Ames was delightful as a philosophic bachelor friend. John Harwood was impurturbable and magnificent as a butler, whose deadly susceptibility to the other sex had led him into marrying more frequently than was discreet.

And a companion portrait of a lady's maid was excellently played by Maud Andrews. Jessie Glendenning was the finnce and Mrs. Jacques an amusing dowager. It was proof of the intelligence of the company that Mr. Field's dialogue, so smooth and light that glibness would have been treacherously easy, never lost the sound and savor of human talk.
